

The Inspiration Behind The Chromadome

The Chromadome is dedicated to the memory of my brother, Dr. Daniel Friedland.

Danny was a physician, educator, innovator, and internationally respected leader in resilience, mindfulness, and integrative health. Throughout his life, he believed that caring for others begins with learning how to care for ourselves and that compassion is something that can be intentionally cultivated, practiced, and shared.

One of the ideas that most deeply shaped his work was what he called “scaling love.” He believed that by thoughtfully designing the systems, environments, and relationships that surround us, we can create conditions that help people care more deeply for themselves and for one another.

His work continues to inspire the philosophy behind The Chromadome.

Every immersive experience created here reflects the belief that our surroundings matter. That moments of beauty matter. That reflection matters. That creating space for recovery is not a luxury, but an essential part of living well.

The Earth & Cosmos Journey includes a loving-kindness meditation created by Danny—a gentle reminder that compassion is not simply something we feel, but something we practice.

In many ways, The Chromadome is a continuation of a conversation we shared for years: a conversation about resilience, wonder, science, mindfulness, and what it means to build environments that help people flourish.

This space is dedicated to his memory with profound gratitude for the life he lived, the wisdom he shared, and the countless lives he touched. Every visitor who walks through these doors becomes part of that continuing legacy.

“One environment. One breath. One moment at a time.”
